Representative Alexander, of North Carolina, thought the proclamation premature, and the pressure which brought it about all one-sided. The Sherman law, he said, could have been repealed last session if some compromise measure could have been agreed upon. He wanted to relieve the agricultural districts from depreciation in land values, and thought that a repeal of the tax on State banks would go far towards helping the South.

Representative Grady, of North Carolina, agreed with his colleague, and also contended that if Congress should demonetize sliver, the States had the right under the Constitution to remonetize it, and he predicted that this would happen.
